

Here are mission opportunities with Becka and Blake Hart in Chile:

Visiting professor

Arica has, for many years, suffered from lack of pastoral and lay leadership training. If you're on a ministerial staff or are a seminary or college professor we would love for you to come and share your knowledge with church leadership here in Arica. The possibilities are endless from pastoral care to church music to biblical or theological studies. Whatever your passion is, there are people here eager to learn from your experiences (and hopefully to teach us from some of their experiences as well!)

Come spend a week in the driest desert on earth! Small teams (around ten or less) and individuals are welcome to come work in a local children's foster home doing basic construction, VBS-type activities, or just playing with the children. The home has about forty children ranging from newborn to seven years old. Most of the children have been removed from an at-risk home situation and they greatly need love and positive attention. The home workers need encouragement as most of them are overworked and underpaid. Our summer months (December-February) are the best time for teams, but we're happy to have teams any time of year.

We would love to host a group of university students to come do side-by-side mission projects with local university students. This could be volunteering at a local children's home, doing light construction on a local church, ministering to carnival/circus workers or other activities. The two groups would work together on projects and participate in joint English/Spanish worship services—with each group having some leadership.

Please let me know if any of these are unclear. Thanks so much for publishing them! From a logistics standpoint, we'd prefer small groups or individuals—but we're willing to give a larger group a try if the situation arose.

Grace and peace,

Bekah Hart
